Hi all,

I have contacted the listserv for this purpose in the past, and I appreciate all of your responses. I am teaching a seminar on the psychology of globalization for the second time. I have an early unit on the psychological study of culture/cultural psychology and some of the readings were not well-received the last time around. Could you recommend articles or book chapters that provide a general overview of an important topic in cultural psych that would be appropriate for undergraduates at a non-elite university? In particular, I am looking for readings that make good use of illustrative examples.

Many thanks,

Andy Hostetler

I was about to make a similar request. For a class I teach online I am looking for an new assignment that would be the basis of a case study in an undergraduate course on Cross Cultural Dynamics that is part of an Organizational Behavior major. Our students are working adults and in addition to majors the course is taken as by nurses, management, criminal justice and BA psychology students. I am looking for a video, article, interview that students can analyse using the cultural psychology lens.

Hi Andrew,

You might consider--perhaps as supplementary reading--my book The Polarized Mind: Why It's Killing Us and What We Can Do About It (more info at: <https://amzn.to/2L7RQVU>). While this work presents an existential-phenomenological slant on culture (power centers) throughout history, and only provides brief synopses, it still may be of interest because of its relevance to the current state of our society and world. The polarized mind is the fixation on a single point of view to the utter exclusion of competing points of view, which I see it as the psychosocial "scourge" of humanity, while also providing possible alternatives to address this global/historical challenge.

Best wishes on finding suitable materials for your class,
Kirk Schneider

Hello, Andrew,

In addition to Kirk's wonderful book, I have used the following in my teaching at UBC and Harvard and students have very much liked them.

Heine, S. J. (2012). Cultural Psychology (2nd edition). New York: W. W. Norton.

Dear Sayyed Mohsen Fatemi, ... Mohsen, and others on this list:

I am glad you mention the Keith (ed.) Encyclopedia.

I have a little article in that book. My essay is on Max Weber. (I had half forgotten about it.) I am continuing to work with Weberian ideas. He has been neglected in psychology, of course.

There are over 600 entries in three volumes. I feel the encyclopedia has not been given as much attention as it deserves. )

I bought a copy for myself and have found it useful, all the more since my Ph.D. is in sociology rather than psychology. (I am a member of three divisions of the APA and have given papers at APA conferences twice.)

I noticed there is no review on amazon.com

You might consider encouraging a grad student to do a review. Or maybe you might want to do it yourself. I feel I cannot do that myself since there s a slight conflict of interest.

Sincerely,

Hans

Bakker, J. I. (Hans). 2013. "Weber, Max." Pp 1345-1348 in Keith, Kenneth D. (ed.) 2013. Encyclopedia of Cross-Cultural Psychology. Volume III. Malden, MA: Wiley Blackwell.

I cite one of my own essays in my encyclopedia essay: (Bakker 2010).

Bakker, J. I. "Hans". 2010. "Deference versus Democracy [Egalitarianism] in Traditional and Modern Bureaucracy: Refinements of Weber's Ideal Type Model." Pp. 105-128 in Baber, Zaheer and J. M. Bryant (eds.) 2010. Society, History, and the Global Human Condition: Essays in Honor of Irving M. Zeitlin. Landham, MD: Lexington Books/ Rowman & Littlefield.

I would be glad to send my 2010 essay to anyone who might be interested. One key point is that many times scholars who discuss Weber's ideas on bureaucracy fail to point out that they are mostly just considering his ideas about "modern" (post 15th century) bureaucracies and do not consider pre-modern, "traditional" bureaucracies in India, China, Indonesia, Khmer, etc.

Andrew,
The chapters in our recent edited book on internationalizing psychology teaching each offer some annotated references for each key psychology subdiscipline, as well as suggestions for other activities and materials to internationalize the curriculum as well as indication whether a resource is best suited for UG, Advanced undergraduate or graduate.

Book Website and reviews (Rich, Gielen, & Takooshian, 2017) Internationalizing the Teaching of Psychology

<http://www.infoagepub.com/products/Internationalizing-the-Teaching-of-Psychology>

On a somewhat different note, for book length supplements, you may try Living Buddhism by Julia Cassaniti or The Spirit Catches you and you fall down by Ann Fadiman; both are by non psychologists but have rich thick descriptions of issues such as religious and traditional healing in SE Asia vs "Western" psychiatry/therapy; there a veritable plethora of conversation starting prompts to be found re: addictions in the Cassaniti, including nuanced insights into a local Christian village as well.

My favorite for all time for introducing undergraduate students to culture was the book of readings edited by Lonner and Malpass, Psychology and Culture. After it went out of print the publisher gave me permission to continue to use photocopies for my class. Lonner, W. J., & Malpass, R. (1994). Psychology and culture. Boston: Allyn & Bacon. See chapters, for example, by Boesch, First experiences in Thailand, or Mistry and Rogoff, Remembering in cultural context and others.

Dear Andrew,

For a general, easy-to-read overview on culture from a psychological perspective, Routledge is going to publish "Theories of Culture" in April 2019.

As for illustrative examples, in "Research Methods in Indigenous Contexts" (Springer; 2018), some relevant articles of the UN Declaration in the Rights of Indigenous Peoples are portrayed and explained one by one, with regard to their practical application in cultural psychology's fieldwork.

Here is a study on the impact of mobile phones on indigenous societies:
<[http://krepublishers.com/02-Journals/JC/JC-07-0-000-16-Web/JC-07-2-000-16-Abst-PDF/JC-7-2-344-16-090-Groh-A/JC-7-2-344-16-090-Groh-A-Tx\[23\].pdf](http://krepublishers.com/02-Journals/JC/JC-07-0-000-16-Web/JC-07-2-000-16-Abst-PDF/JC-7-2-344-16-090-Groh-A/JC-7-2-344-16-090-Groh-A-Tx[23].pdf)>.

Please find attached an article on indigenous colour concepts and another one on indigenous communities and sustainable tourism.

I hope that you find that helpful.

All the best,
