

Lecture: Edward Slingerland on "Body and Mind in the Analects: Embodied Cognition, Digital Humanities, and the Project of Comparative Philosophy"

From: Mieke Matthyssen

Sent: Friday, September 24, 2021 9:37 AM

Hi Louise,

Maybe this – probably very text based and theoretical - talk next Monday by Edward Slingerland on the (myth of) mind-body dualism in early Chinese thinking (esp. in the Analects) might be interesting for some members of the mailing list. In the introduction it says it will address the issue of “psychological interiority” as acclaimed Western concept, and as assumingly lacking in the Analects.

For all info, see <http://warpweftandway.com/images/2021/09/Slingerland-Coffee-Talk-Poster-final.pdf>

Enjoy,

Mieke