

Call For Participation to participate the special issue: We are not WEIRD: Chinese Culture and Psychology

From: Yung-Jong Shiah (Via FrontiersIn) <noreply@frontiersin.org>

In recent years, interest in research on Chinese culture and psychology has increased rapidly. However, most research paradigms based on samples from Western, Educated, Industrialized, Rich, and Democratic (WEIRD) societies, including theories, methods, and research procedures, may become maladaptive or “weird” once moved to other societies. Thus, we aim to focus on this emergent movement of scholars working on the dialogue and interaction between Chinese culture and psychology to explore the most contemporary modes of Chinese philosophical, religious, and spiritual thoughts and practices, emphasizing their significant application to current psychological research.

Taking an eclectic approach to study on human values, health, and well-being, this Research Topic hopes to publish original research articles that deal with mental and physical health issues by integrating the contribution from Chinese traditions.

We welcome new empirical findings, theoretical proposals as well as thorough scientific reviews, and specific topics can include but are not limited to:

1. contemporary theories of Chinese philosophical, religious, and spiritual thought and practice with particular emphasis on their relevance to current psychological research in terms of explicit consideration of implications for psychological functioning.
2. mental and physical health in relation to Chinese philosophical, religious, and spiritual thought and practice.
