Subject: [DIV24] Mark Freeman: This Thursday's "Brutal and Beautiful: Narrating the Tragicomedy of Dementia"

Dear Division 24 Colleagues,

I hope you are doing well and I've missed seeing many of your faces over the course of this last year. Let's hope for some restoration and reconnection in the time ahead.

As many of you know, a few Div 24 colleagues initiated a Psychological Humanities and Ethics Series at Boston College beginning last September. We've been absolutely delighted by the results. Hosting wide ranging thinkers-- from neuroscientists to post-colonial theorists-- we've had some amazing conversations. Over 3000 participants have been present in these lectures and workshops over the last 9 months and we've experienced it as a blessing in the midst of such a fraught time.

Our hope is that this space can be one of many wherein our Division/Society can build community and also have an output in the world.

In our last lecture of the year, this Thursday (5/13) we will be hosting our very own Mark Freeman. He will be taking us on a powerful journey in relationship to his newest book, "Do I Look at You With Love?". Join us for the 7-8pm lecture by signing up here: <https://bostoncollege-lsoe.catalog.instructure.com/browse/pce/courses/brutal-and-beautiful-narrating-the-tragicomedy-of-dementia>

It's free with this code: ETHICSERIES14

I hope to see many of you there and I'm looking forward to reconnecting with many of you soon!

Warmly,
David
